SEARCH FOR BOY KIDNAPPED

May Order Brief Suspension for Gethro TO SAVE BOODLERS

Committee on Rules Frantically Trying to Prevent Further Disclosures.

Surprised by the sentiment among many legislators, and placed upon the defensive by the demand for publicity, the House Committee on Rules is frantically playing for time and "sitting upon the tail" of the recent malodorous star chamber history in legislation.

It is said today, on no less an authority than Representative Frank J. Gethro himself, whose expulsion the committee recommended, that there are subscribers to get him to stop his opposition to their action, in return for which they will change their recommendation of expulsion to suspension for five or ten days.

"I am going to fight the case to the finish," he said today, "and I will not stop until I have won for me, and I think I have got the right feeling."

House leaders are confident that Gethro is unshaken in this last statement. A member of the committee on Rules said today: "When the vote is taken a majority of the House will adopt the recommendation of the committee. We are certain of it."

The Rules Committee was not ready for a consideration of the Gethro case in the over night session, when it will be taken up. It was announced that the public printers to get the evidence as devoted in time for consideration to-day.

Party Whip Is Defied.
 Meanwhile, the Rules Committee and Gethro's friends are busy at work in an endeavor to secure votes. The committee was stunned yesterday by the discovery that the party whip, who was supposed to be in the room when orders were given to support the committee's recommendation, had actually "betrayed the cause" of the committee by giving the signal for the public printers to get the evidence as devoted in time for consideration to-day.

HEAVY FIRING AT CROMSTADT; MORE MUTINIES FEARED

LONDON, June 20.—A news agency dispatch from St. Petersburg states that mutiny has broken out at Cromstadt.

Heavy firing is going on, and soldiers and marines have paraded the streets and are holding incendiary meetings.

Rioting has started and it is believed a repetition of the outbreak of last November has occurred.

Soldiers and workmen, the dispatch adds, are in constant conflict and the entire city is turbulent.

Many of the inhabitants have fled.

Two battalions of artillery of the guard and two other batteries with machine guns have been dispatched from Oranienbaum.

The troops were encountered near the island upon which the city is located and did not come within the limits until the disorder began to-day.

John Mulhern, Missing Since Yesterday, Was Last Seen in Company with Mysterious Stranger Who Promised Him Candy—General Alarm Sent Out for Him.

Mrs. Annie Dunn's Description of Strange Man Seen with Boy

Hair, gray.
 Mustache, gray.
 Height, about five feet eight inches.
 Age, forty-five to sixty years.
 Clothes, dark mixed suit, black derby hat.
 He carried a large bundle.
 He was a stranger in the neighborhood.

John Mulhern, eight years of age, has been mysteriously missing from his home in South Boston since early yesterday afternoon, and to-day Boston and vicinity are being searched for him.

The boy was last seen in company with a strange man, who engaged him in conversation at the corner of Dorchester avenue and B street, a block from the little fellow's home at No. 11 B street.

The parents of the boy, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Mulhern, believe that he was kidnapped and to-day the mother was in a frantic condition over the continued absence of her son.

MAN OFFERED HIM CANDY.

John was on his way to school after the noon recess and had stopped to play for a little while with Joseph Costa, ten years old, who lives directly across the street from the Mulherns.

A short, thick-set man, carrying a bundle, came along, according to the Costa boy and others who saw him, walked up to John and took him by the arm.

"Go with me, and I will buy you some candy," the man said.

The Mulhern boy hesitated. The man urged him by pulling at his arm. Then he pulled him over his right back, and came with me to a store, so that I can get the candy.

John walked away with the man. The Costa boy called a watch to see if he came back. He did not. The boy was not seen in the neighborhood again during the afternoon.

MOTHER BECAME UNEASY.

When Mulhern, the missing boy's fifteen-year-old sister, saw the strange man talking to her brother, she continued on to school and did not see them go away together. Mrs. Annie Dunn, who was looking out a window, saw them go away together. Mrs. Dunn said that the man was a large, middle-aged man, dressed in a dark suit, and that she thought that John was going with him to show him some place in the neighborhood.

STOLEN, SAY POLICE.

Police Captain Westcott, when seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN this afternoon, said: "This is a mysterious case. I am all at sea as yet. We were not given the kidnapping clue until this afternoon, and have not had much time to work on the case yet."

"When I first heard of the disappearance of the boy we feared that he had been kidnapped. It took some time to find out that he had been stolen. We are now looking for him in all places for the boy."
